The John Eagle Collision Center houses a 75,000 square foot repair operation. There are 52 repair stations dedicated to the structural and cosmetic repairs necessary to restore the vehicle to its condition prior to the incident that caused the damage.

Once the structural and metal work is completed it is prepared for painting. Since we offer a lifetime warranty, each vehicle is meticulously inspected and prepared before being painted.

When the vehicle is ready for painting it is moved to the paint area where there are 10 booths available. Paint codes are identified and matching colors are mixed for every vehicle. Professional and experienced painters ensure that the proper level of paint products are applied to achieve a factory finish.

Once the vehicle has been painted it is taken to the Buff and Detail area. The vehicle is once again inspected for imperfections in the paint finish. All painted areas included in the repair must pass the inspection or have the discrepancies corrected before moving to the final detail. These activities occur in an area exclusive to this activity to ensure quality results. This is also the time in the process when final assembly and trim work is completed.

Throughout the repair process there are quality checks. Each quality check ensures that the vehicle is ready to move onto the next step. When the vehicle has passed through all the repair stages, it goes through a final Quality Inspection. No vehicle is delivered to the customer until it passes this inspection. The vehicles mechanical and electrical functionality is inspected along with its fit and finish. When the vehicle is ready for delivery it is stage in the climate controlled delivery area.

The entire facility is safeguarded with 24 hour security to protect the customer's vehicle from the time it arrives to the day it is delivered.

The core of our repair business has always been the general consumer. Regardless of the vehicles value in the market, we realize that it represents value to the customer. With almost 50 years in the collision repair business we have learned to treat each customer and their vehicle with respect and professionalism.

When your vehicle comes to us we don't just see the damage we see the possibility that someone was injured or someone's life has been disrupted.

Our professional Estimators maintain focus on the customer and assist them in working through the process of recovery. The Estimator is familiar with all domestic and import vehicles and is capable of communicating with your insurance agent so that the repair can move swiftly through completion.

There are occasions when the customer elects not to go through their insurance company to pay for the repairs. Factory Trained & Certified Technicians | Exotic & Aluminum Collision Repair Center in Dallas, Texas

The John Eagle family of dealerships includes Aston Martin of Dallas and John Eagle European in Austin that sell and service Aston Martin, Bentley, Lotus, along with other highline vehicles. John Eagle Collision Center is Factory trained and certified with these manufacture as well as Jaguar. We have repair specialist certified in aluminum repair to address the unique requirements for repairing these vehicles. The Exotic and Aluminum repair area is separated from the rest of the facility operations to control the environment and achievement of quality repairs.

Customers who make the investment in these types of vehicles need to know that their investments are being protected. Being certified by the manufacture means having access to parts that non certified shops cannot obtain. Most of these parts are related to the structure of the vehicle. Without the parts the vehicle simply cannot be repaired. To be a certified repair facility requires a significant investment in tools and machinery along with technician training conducted at the factories in Europe. Our technicians work closely with the manufacture and our dealerships to maintain current knowledge of the vehicle's factory specifications. Frame machines and welding equipment are specialized for this type of repair.

When the vehicle is painted special attention is given to color match, thickness and finish. Extra time and care is given to achieve the results intended by the manufacture.
